Hyster was founded in 1929 as the Willamette-Ersted Company in Portland, Oregon.[1] The company was purchased in 1989 by NACCO Industries, Inc. and became a part of NACCO Materials Handling Group. NACCO spun off the materials handling business in 2012 as Hyster-Yale Materials Handling, Inc.,[2] which continues to market products under the Hyster brand name. The name "Hyster" was allegedly derived from a term commonly used by logging workers in the Pacific Northwest at the end of the 19th century. When a load of lumber was ready to be transported, a logger would yell "hoist 'er". According to the Hyster Company web page,[1] this term became synonymous with Hyster trucks. Distribution and support for Hyster products is organized around major world regions: North America; Europe, the Middle East and Africa; Asia - Pacific. Hyster also manufactured a successful line of compaction machinery and road-rollers, including machinery in America and they produced a wide range of models with many successful design concepts. Hyster was

From the 1950s through the 1980s they had a comprehensive and well-regarded line of products. Along with the Raygo company these two manufacturers were perhaps the best known in the US, until European and other brands became common.
